It was Rahner who summed up “the new trinitarianism” with the watchword,

“The economic Trinity is the immanent Trinity, and vice versa.”

That is, when we experience Father, Son, and Spirit in the course of history and our spiritual lives, we experience who

God is inside
himself (immanent
to his own being),
and — here the big
step — what God is in himself is nothing
but what he is for us.

What are some examples of trinity?

In our physical world, the best analogy for trinity is water, which can exist in three different forms: ice, water or gas (steam) depending on the energies the water molecules hold.
